OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

Rick Mystrom

Greetings!

As both Mayor of Anchorage and a former Arctic Winter Games athlete, I extend a very warm welcome to all the participants of the 1996 Arctic Winter Games. The Municipality of Anchorage and in particular the community of Chugiak/Eagle River are very proud to host this great athletic competition.

As many as 1500 athletes and participants from Alaska, Canada, Russia and Greenland will once again come together to share in the friendship and camaraderie of the Games. The discipline, spirit and determination of the participants make this event exciting for the spectators and challenging for the athletes.

Many of our citizens are involved in the production of the Arctic Winter Games. They have worked long hours to ensure the success of the competition. To each of them, I extend a special thank you.

I wish good luck to all of the competitors and hope that each of you enjoy your stay in our community.

Sincerely,

Rick Mystrom

Over 1600 ulus to be presented this week

More than 1,600 medals will be awarded to athletes, coaches and cultural participants in the 1996 Arctic Winter Games. These aren't just any medals, however, they are ulus.

"The ulu is the traditional Inuit knife and it's symbolic of sportsmanship," said Alvin Aramburo, head of the awards committee.

Aramburo said approximately 1,400 bronze, silver and gold ulus will be hung around the necks of athletes who are victorious in the Games. An additional 45 brass ulus will be awarded to cultural delegates, 65 to mission staff from each country and 120 to coaches.

The ulus were made in Canada, Aramburo said. He said the name of the sport appears on the back of each one. The design of the ulu is determined by the Arctic Winter Games International Committee.

Those winning ulus will be awarded them in special awards ceremonies to be held each night at various locations. Many of the ceremonies will be held at the various venues with one ceremony being held each night at the Town Square ice wall created especially for awards presentations.

"We're just going to have a sampling in Town Square," said Aramburo about the ceremonies. He said a ceremony will be held at the ice wall each night at 5 p.m. except for Wednesday. On Wednesday, two ceremonies will be held, one at 7:40 p.m. and one an hour later.

"It's going to be pretty much similar to what you see in the Olympics," Aramburo said. He said flag bearers from various local youth organizations will present the flags of the countries on the podiums and will also present the ulus on pillows to the VIPs who will actually hang the awards on the athletes. The national anthem of the country winning the gold will be played. Each ceremony will take approximately 10 minutes.

Aramburo said more than 50 volunteers have helped in planning the various awards ceremonies. "I have a great bunch of volunteers," the coordinator said.

Schools converted to athlete villages for week

By JEANNE ENRIGHT
Alaska Star Reporter

As the Games approached and it really began to sink in that our little town would be hosting one of the most important sporting events of the decade, the pressing question of the hour became: "Where in Eagle River are 1,525 athletes and coaches, as well as a plethora of accompanying officials, going to sleep?"

The answer: Fire Lake Elementary, Gruening Middle and Chugiak High schools, Birchwood Camp and the Transient Quarters on Fort Richardson.

As of March 3, the three schools are no longer simply "schools." Birchwood isn't a "camp" and the Transient Quarters aren't "transient quarters." For the duration of the Games, these locations will be referred to as villages.

The villages house the game participants, with some of the schools' classrooms temporarily converted into dormitories.

George Newsham, director of village services, said that providing beds for the large crew was no easy task.

First, the Air Force said they had about 300 cots available. But when they went to get the cots out of the warehouse in which they were stored, they found that "a couple hundred (of the cots) went bad," said Newsham.

Luckily, the Army had some cots to lend, as did the local Reserve unit and the Anchorage chapter of the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross' cots were in Kenai, Homer and Seward, "so we've been pulling cots from everywhere in Southcentral (Alaska)," Newsham said.

Sleeping bags weren't as difficult to get a hold of, thanks to Northern Commercial Co. The Canadian company, which is affiliated with Alaskan Commercial Co., donated 1,800 sleeping bags for the event.

The athletes and officials are invited to take the bags with them as a souvenir of the Games.

Newsham said the younger athletes are being housed in classrooms with their own teammates. Volunteers set up cots and placed a sleeping bag on each one.

The adult athletes are being housed at Birchwood Camp, which already has sleeping quarters.

And the mission staff and other officials are being housed at the Transient Quarters.

Since bathing facilities are limited at most of the villages — the athletes and officials have to shower at their appointed location, either Chugiak, Gruening, the McDonald Center or the Transient Quarters — shower schedules have been set for them, Newsham said.

However, athletes will be allowed to shower after each competition they take part in, he said.

Another tremendous task Newsham has helped to coordinate is the transportation schedule.

"(Transportation is) probably as complicated an exercise as possible," Newsham said.

He pointed out that athletes and officials must reach competitions on time, and that most must be transported to Chugiak High for each meal.

Newsham said the Anchorage School District transportation director Steve Kalmes, who is in charge of transportation for the Games, is doing a great job of coordinating bus schedules.

ASD buses, which are provided Laidlaw Transit Inc., will be used, as will spare People Mover buses. It will take buses to transport everyone to "Arcticgrape the banquet for the games, Newsham said.

"My eyes glaze over when I start look at the sports schedule, and they really glaze over when I look at the transportation schedule," he said.

Newsham, who is an assistant municipal attorney "in real life," said he enjoys work for the Games, and that he is especially pleased with the support others have devoted to the effort.

"The best part of this job is the vibrant spirit of the folks you work with and the second biggest thing is the ability of the community to come together," Newsham said.

"Our hope is that we leave a bunch of equipment as a legacy for the sports community in the Anchorage/Chugiak - Eagle River area, as well as that warm glow of the community accomplishment at the end of the Games he said.

When It's Time To Choose A Radio Communications Supplier, This Is The Last Thing You Want To Do.

Before you stick your neck out and invest your community's money on a radio communications system, it pays to ask around.

Ask police officers which radio communications equipment they rely on to protect their citizens. Ask fire fighters which equipment they trust most during emergencies.

Ask your friends in government what supplier they turn to to solve their radio communications needs.

Time and time again, you'll hear the Motorola name. And with good reason.

Motorola is one of the world's leading providers of wireless communications. And we've been providing communications solutions to government agencies for more than 50 years.

Why stick your neck out, when all you have to do is ask, Motorola.

Quarantine excludes mushers

By JEANNE ENRIGHT
Alaska Star Reporter

Quarantine regulations of their homelands have shut the Russians and Greenlanders out of the Arctic Winter Games dog mushing competitions, said Dixie Waddell, president of Chugiak Dog Mushing and wife of Bill, dog mushing chair for the Games.

Russia and Greenland's strict customs requirements mean that only Team Alaska and three Canadian teams will compete in the races, which are set to begin Wednesday at Beach Lake Trails near Chugiak High School.

Dan Holland, area director for U.S. customs in Anchorage, said that the Canadian teams—Team Alberta, Team Yukon and Team Northwest Territories—will not be required to enter quarantine when entering or leaving the U.S.

"Having a valid rabies vaccination certificate is the main thing" customs officials will be watching for, Holland said. It's also a good idea to have health certificates on hand for animals entering the country, he said.

Holland said Canada has the same requirements as the U.S. He pointed out that the Yukon Quest, a famous race between Fairbanks and Whitehorse, requires teams to cross from the U.S. into Canada or vice-versa. "We don't stop them at the border to check their rabies certificates," he said.

Holland said that the reason the officials of some countries or states are more strict—insisting that animals stay in quarantine for a specified time period—is because they are afraid rabies might be introduced to their locale.

Hawaii requires a long period of quarantine for animals, for example, since it is separate from the continental U.S. and doesn't have any known cases of rabies so far, he said.

Chugiak: 'Place of Many Places'

By LEE JORDAN
Alaska Star Editor

In all the world, there is only one place called Chugiak. That place is in Alaska, nestled between Knik Arm and the Chugach Mountains.

The name for the area from Fort Richardson north to the Knik River Bridge was chosen in 1947. Legend has it that the name is derived from the ancient Denaina language spoken by the Athabascan people of Eklutna. It translates to "Place of Many Places."

Chugach, the name given to the surrounding mountains by later explorers, is said to be a corrupted version of the true pronunciation.

Chugiak in 1947 was thinly populated. Only 50 families lived in the area at the time. They had obtained homesteads along the narrow road which snaked north toward Palmer. Many of them opened businesses — lodges, garages, service stations and bars.

Anchorage grew rapidly during the years following World War II. Chugiak grew even faster as people moved to the rural area and established homes. They mostly were an independent group, clearing land and building their own homes, one board at a time.

By the mid-1950s, the portion of the community which lies closest to Anchorage had developed into a small town of its own, the population outstripping that of the sections to the north. A separate post office was opened and the neighborhood became known as Eagle River. Eagle River's population today is about double that of the Chugiak area.

Chugiak and Eagle River were unincorporated areas when the Municipality of Anchorage was formed in 1975. The local government's boundaries extend from Girdwood on the south to Eklutna on the north, a total of nearly 100 highway miles.

All public services are provided through state, municipal or private agencies. Telephone and electric utilities in Chugiak - Eagle River are provided by member-owned cooperatives which are based in Palmer.

Emergency services are provided through the Municipality of Anchorage which operates a fire station in Eagle River. A highly-trained paramedic unit is based there. A volunteer fire department serves the Chugiak area which has four fire stations. Skilled Emergency Medical Technicians respond to emergencies with ambulances housed at each of the stations.

Water for Anchorage homes and businesses comes from Eklutna Lake north of Chugiak. A four-foot pipeline is buried through Chugiak - Eagle River to take water from that glacier-fed lake to the city utility which is supplemented by deep wells and water drawn from Ship Creek at Fort Richardson.

Schools in Chugiak - Eagle River are the responsibility of the Anchorage School District which operates school throughout the entire municipality.

Chugiak High School, site of the opening ceremonies and host to many of the events, was opened in 1964 to serve an expected enrollment of 300 students. Its rated capacity of 1700 students is currently exceeded by more than 100.

The Municipality of Anchorage covers 1,955.7 square miles, about the same size as the state of Delaware.

Chugiak - Eagle River occupies about half of the Anchorage land area, although much of that is undeveloped. The entire Chugiak - Eagle River area is about the same size as the state of Rhode Island.

The Eagle River extends more than 15 miles in an easterly direction, going through a beautiful valley. At the end of Eagle River Road is the Chugach State Park Nature Center, a popular place where visitors can learn about the flora and fauna of the valley.

Chugach State Park consists of 495,000 acres, the second largest state park in the entire United States.

Still considered a "place of many places," Chugiak - Eagle River continues to grow at a rapid pace. It has the largest portion of undeveloped land within the municipality and anticipates continued growth for many years.

Despite the many changes which have taken place over the years, one thing which has remained constant is a sense of community pride and a friendly welcome to everyone who comes this way.

Despite the many changes which have taken place over the years, one thing which has remained constant is a sense of community pride and a friendly welcome to everyone who comes this way.

Providing fire and medical protection

The Chugiak Volunteer Fire Department will provide exclusive fire and medical coverage for the Arctic Winter Games this week.

The department consists of trained emergency medical technicians and emergency trauma technicians who volunteer their time to respond to community's emergencies. They cover the entire area north of Eagle River to the Knik River Bridge.

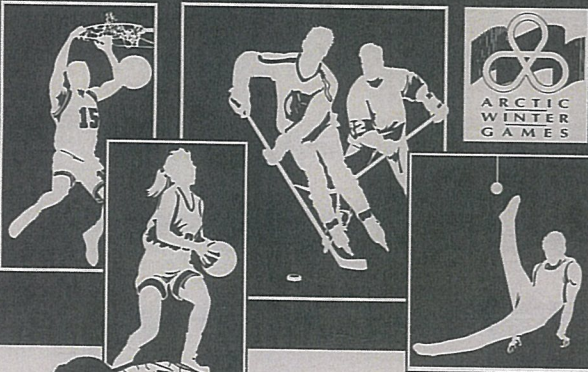

Chief Gary Davis said an additional 10 volunteers will be on hand 24 hours a day during the Games.

Davis also said two ambulances and two fire engine companies will be ready 24 hours a day at Latimer Station on the Old Glenn Highway to respond to emergencies.

"As part of the Chugiak - Eagle River community, we are looking forward to contributing to making the Games both safe and successful," Davis said.

Eagle River true to its name — more eagles seen

By KRISTEN SEINE
Alaska Star Reporter

Our town was named for the black and white birds of prey that are also the national symbol. Recently, Eagle River has been living up to its name as more and more eagles have been remaining here over the winter instead of flying south for warmer weather.

On any given day in the heart of Eagle River, anyone driving near the post office, bowling alley, fire station — or The Star's office — can glimpse as many as eight eagles at a time in the taller trees. Local folks seem to have adopted the birds and many residents have taken to feeding them — one woman reportedly cooks for the birds on a daily basis.

Many people believe feeding eagles is illegal — it's not. "The eagle is considered an endangered species in the Lower 48 (states)," said U.S. Fish and Wildlife Officer Brian Larson, "but in Alaska it's not on the endangered list, which removes it from all the rules and regulations that apply to endangered species."

Alaska statutes do prohibit feeding certain animals — moose, bears, wolves, weasels and foxes, to be exact. It says nothing about feeding eagles, Larson said.

The Eagle River Car Wash and Duck Pond has been a major draw for the birds of prey, said Dr. Jim Scott of the Arctic Animal Hospital in Anchorage, who is also the founder of the Bird Treatment and Learning Center (Bird TLC).

Scott said Bird TLC has taken in more than 30 injured eagles just in the last two months. That's a dramatic increase from recent years, he said.

The eagles are here in part because ducks are here, both in Eagle River and in Anchorage, which to an eagle is but a hop away, Scott said. As of last year, there were an estimated 4,000 ducks in the Anchorage Bowl alone that didn't migrate to warmer climes during the winter — that's 10 to 15 generations of non-migrating ducks, he said.

And if the food is available, there's no reason to leave.

But ducks and small dogs and cats are not the only animals on the eagles' menu, it seems. The Duck Pond has even lost its pecocks to the birds.

"They've gotten several of them over the winter," said Sharon Thomas, who not only owns the Duck Pond and Car Wash with her husband Larry, but lives on the site as well. "This place makes a very convenient lunch place for them.

"You wouldn't imagine it, but they have swooped down and taken some of our peacocks," she said. "I think it's because they stand out in the white snow. And whereas the ducks and geese kind of take cover from the eagles, the peacocks fear nothing."

Thomas said, "we lose a duck or two every week to the eagles." Even so, she hadn't a bad word to say against the feathered thieves.

And such is the attitude of most residents of the town that bears the eagles' name. "It's absolutely delightful," said Susan Gorski, executive director of the Chugiak - Eagle River Chamber of Commerce.

"I hope they're here to stay," she said.

Fish and Wildlife biologist Bill Eldridge flies aerial surveys during warmer months to track the eagle population. He said around 60 or 70 eagles can be found in the fall at the mouth of Eagle River, where they feed on ducks who die from phosphorus poisoning there. There are another four or five pairs who nest near the Eagle River flats, he said.

Where to find eagles

The best places to spot eagles for picture taking tend to be in and around Eagle River — where the people are. Favored nesting trees are at the following places:

The fire station (take the Old Glenn Highway south to Eagle River Road, head south for approximately 1/4 mile).

The bowling alley near Town Square (on Business Boulevard).

The post office near Town Square (further down Business Boulevard).

The Alaska Star Newspaper office (take the Old Glenn Highway south to Eagle River Loop Road, head up the hill approximately 100 yards).

Arctic Games competitors are young crowd

By KRISTEN SEINE
Alaska Star Reporter

It's likely there won't be a grey hair seen amongst the contenders for the coveted Games medals. As a matter of fact, a large percentage of the combatants aren't even old enough to drive.

It's definitely a young person's phenomenon.

A glance at some of the teams shows just how young some of the athletes are. Alaska's speed skating team is completely comprised of athletes aged 19 and under — the youngest participants are only 11 years old.

Half of the team is under 15.

All of every tennis team is under 15 — that being a requirement of the sport. Karl Augustad, co-chair of the sport and one-time junior player himself, said there is an added pressure on young people simply because they haven't had the experience.

"I know they're all going to be nervous," he said of the players. "Real nervous. Competition at this level is always like that."

Augustad believes one of the Alaska Team's star players, 14-year-old Chris Cueva, will shine during the upcoming week. "He took silvers in 1994 (Arctic Winter Games) and I have a high expectation that he'll do very well this year," he said.

The real youngsters of the Games will likely show up within the hockey teams' midget divisions, which are only open to people aged 7 and under. Still, it's not a good idea to call anyone holding a hockey stick "hey, shorty."

Eagle River gears up for traffic

By KRISTEN SEINE
Alaska Star Reporter

This week, thousands of people will converge on Eagle River. Hundreds of athletes from around the world — along with their coaches and family members — are here to participate in the 1996 Arctic Winter Games.

Normally, the town of Eagle River has an estimated population of 20,000 people. An additional 10,000 to 15,000 people have been anticipated to visit just to watch the visiting athletes compete.

The potential for a logistical nightmare is set. However, just about everybody who will be touched by this influx has been planning how they will deal with the flood of people for weeks.

The Anchorage Police Department has additional officers in the Chugiak - Eagle River area during the Games "dealing with congestion and keeping the traffic moving," said Sgt. Andy Jackson, who heads the department's traffic division. They'll be helping with pedestrian traffic as well, he said.

Lt. Kris Miller, APD's liaison with the Arctic Winter Games headquarters in Eagle River, has been gearing up for the Games for months now. Detailed plans were worked out to make sure all runs smoothly.

Miller said there will be at least one extra officer in the area "pretty much 'round the clock," plus extra officers on the evening shift to run a snowmachine patrol. There will also be extra staff on hand at the opening and closing ceremonies and Arctic Gras to handle parking there.

Jackson warned people who will try to find a place to park on the side of the road or along the entrances to venue sites. "We will be tagging you for sure," he said.

Some events will have almost no parking, Miller said, except for athletes, coaches and official personnel. "Don't even try to park at places like the opening and closing ceremonies if you don't have a permit," she said.

"If we just let everybody come and park, it would be a nightmare," Miller said.

Police don't expect traffic through Eagle River itself to get too bad, as most venue sites have another access points. However, it probably isn't a good idea to try to drive down Business Boulevard on Wednesday night, during Arctic Gras festivities, as pedestrian traffic will be heavy.

Businesses in the area have been planning for a rush as the Games start.

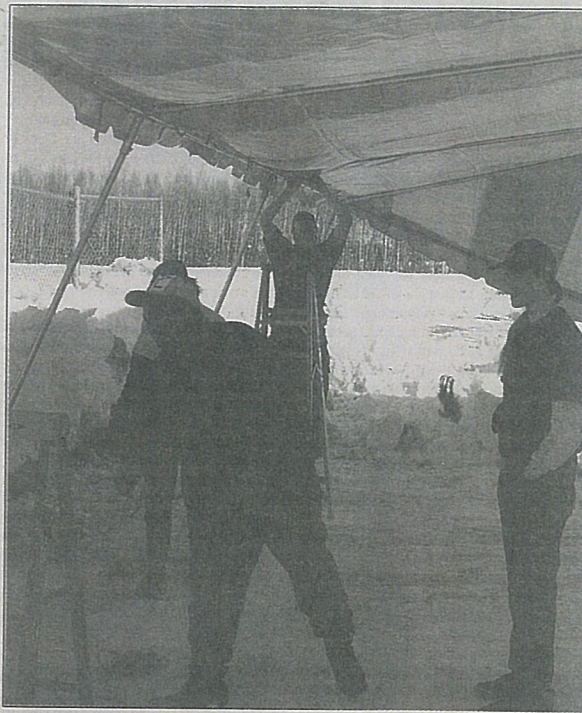

Even though a new Burger King restaurant franchise recently opened in Eagle River, other restaurants predicted enough business to hire extra help for the duration.

Sue Waldron, one of the managers at Eagle River's Wendy's restaurant, said, "I know we're going to have extra people working here, probably two or three on both days and nights, until we see how much it's going to take. If we don't need it, we'll cut back."

Mitch Clark, manager at the Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise in Eagle River, said they planned to bring in two extra people from their Anchorage stores to deal with the anticipated rush.

Those who do find themselves in the area late at night shouldn't plan on finding a room in Eagle River. Rooms at the Eagle River Motel and Hotel (the only inn in Eagle River) weren't completely booked before the Games began, said manager Carol Worker, "but they're getting there."

The hotel/motel has only 13 rooms, but Worker said, "I don't think people realize that. People are calling every day — from all over the world."

Getting ready —

Volunteers worked to set up a tent at Chugiak High School last Friday. More than 2,000 volunteers have been working hard to convert the Chugiak - Eagle River area into an Olympic-type village for the Arctic Winter Games.

Competition never ends.

It took years of perseverance, hard work, and sacrifice to prepare for a few moments of competition.

May those moments be golden.

And may they live in our hearts forever.
Congratulations to all the participants in the Arctic Winter Games.

Ulu News Athlete of the Day

Sabrina Bingham
Volleyball
Team Alaska

Lifelong Alaskan Sabrina Bingham is representing her Eagle River hometown in the 1996 Arctic Winter Games.

Bingham, a Chugiak High School senior, is one of three Eagle River players and one of nine girls statewide named to the Team Alaska junior women's volleyball team, which begins action today at the Buckner Field House on Fort Richardson.

Other Eagle River players include Bobbi Souter, a CHS senior, and Kori Pulver, a junior. The team is coached by Bartlett High varsity coach Shelley Bryant.

At 6 feet, 1 inch, Bingham is a dead giveaway for an athlete. After playing softball and basketball, she selected volleyball as her sport of choice three years ago. As a junior, she was named to the All-Region and All-State teams. Her high school coach Mike Vincent called Bingham "the dominant player in the league" this season.

A potent attacker from her middle hitter position, Bingham is just as lethal to opponents as a frontrow blocker. Often her number of blocks approaches 10 per match.

The lifelong Alaskan said she is looking forward to the Arctic Winter Games. "It's going to be great. I guess I just haven't compared it to anything else I've done, but this is going to be great," she added.

LET THE GAMES BEGIN.

MACTel is the official sponsor of the 1996 Arctic Winter Games. We take our hats off to the more than 2,000 volunteers and 1,500 athletes and coaches that have helped put together the biggest sporting event ever held in Alaska.

Native American Concert tonight

Tonight will be hot in Chugiak as Charlie Hill, Floyd Westerman and Bunny Swan perform in the 1996 Arctic Winter Games Native American Concert beginning at 7 p.m. at Chugiak High School.

Direct from Hollywood, Calif., comedian Charlie Hill is best known for his American Indian parodies on multicultural and intertribal relationships.

Hill will be joined by the popular actor and folk singer Floyd "Red Crow" Westerman. Westerman is probably most recognizable in his portrayals of Indian characters in well known movies including "Dances With Wolves," "Renegade," "The Doors" and "Son of the Morning Star."

Born on a Dakota-Sioux Reservation in 1936, Westerman began his entertainment career as a folk singer with his 1970 release "Custer Died For Your Sins." He recently completed a world tour with Sting and Raoni, Chief of the Kayapo (Amazon) Indian Nation.

Westerman's country folk style will be eloquently complimented with the folk rock style of Singer/Songwriter Bunny Swan.

Swan is an Alaskan born Dena'ina Athabaskan and member of the Kenaitze Indian Tribe. Through her music, Swan combines her artistic talents as a singer and composer to promote and support contemporary native issues including loss of culture and heritage, sobriety awareness and traditional respect for the environment.

Swan has performed with a host of music greats including Jesse Colin Young, Jerry Jeff Walker, Glen Yarbough and John Trudell.

This special concert will open with the Yu'pik/African American Blanchett Brothers performing with Ossie Kairavak.

Fair will feature 60 artists

The 1996 Arctic Winter Games Arts and Crafts Fair opened with a special reception yesterday at Eagle River Elementary School. Sixty Alaskan artisans will sell their handmade arts and crafts at the Fair during the week of the Games.

Located at Eagle River Elementary School, across from the Arctic Winter Games Media Center, the Arts and Crafts Fair will provide an opportunity to see and purchase the finest in arts and crafts of Alaska.

Included will be dolls, beadwork, silver, ivory, baskets, art, slippers and mukluks, Arctic frogs, stoneware, winter wear, photographs, sculptures, wooden items, quiviut, ulus, spirit masks, storytelling tapes, Eskimo drums, ceramics, toys, fur and leather, ba-leen, soapstone and wind chimes. The fair will be open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For more information regarding the Arts and Crafts Fair, please contact the Arctic Winter Games Host Society office at 694-8866. Admission to the fair is free.

Transportation info at villages

Transportation for athletes, accredited officials and media during the 1996 Arctic Winter Games will be provided through the use of 18 municipal transit buses and school buses owned by Laidlaw Transit, Inc.

Four fixed routes will serve the venues located within Chugiak - Eagle River. Venues located in Anchorage will be served on buses making direct trips.

Head signs on the buses will indicate the route and signs and signs at established bus stops will list bus pick-up and delivery times. Route maps will be posted in several locations at each housing venue.

Personnel in the transportation office located at Chugiak High School will be available to answer questions regarding any of the routes and schedules. Phone numbers will be posted with route maps.

Pin trading — start looking

Welcome to the 1996 Arctic Winter Games! Sharp-eyed collectors will begin scouting lapels all over town looking for pins that will soon become one of the hottest games in town.

It's a game that needs no tickets to get into and no special venues to participate. Anyone can play — all it takes is a pin, a smile and a willingness to talk to anyone you meet. The truly professional traders know that there are no strangers at the Games, only friends they haven't met yet.

The unofficial sport of the 1996 Arctic Winter Games is pin trading. Pin trading activity will center around Eagle River Town Square. This will be the mecca for pin traders from around the world.

Those with keen eyes will see pins from past Games among collections being shared. Notice the logo's from past games. The Inokshook, known as "Rocky" was the mascot for the 1994 games in Slave Lake. Look for "Paddy" from Whitehorse, 1992; "Knifey" from Yellowknife 1990; "Arwin" from Fairbanks, 1988.

There may be some buttons from the original Games in 1974 which were held in Anchorage. These buttons will be rare and probably not tradable but a treat to see.

For those unfamiliar with pin trading, there are three types of pins. The Host Society (meaning the Chugiak - Eagle River Host Society that staged this particular set of games) put out a selected number of pins. These include pins representing the Games, pins the volunteers earn by contributing hundreds of hours of free labor, pins provided by sponsors of the games like MACtel and pins earned by specific volunteers like medical, security, transportation, officials and cultural groups. There are also some "special" pins made by various committees and they can only be obtained by trading with someone on those committees.

The second type of pins are those brought by the various teams. Each contingency will bring pins representing their team, specific sports and various other supporters of their travel to this set of Games. Watch future columns for more information on these.

The third type are pins brought by the Arctic Winter Games International Board of Directors. These are the coveted gold ulu. For those who think trading takes too much time or don't feel that their bargaining skills are up to par, full sets of Host Society pins can be purchased at Baba's Cove souvenir store located in the Carrs Mall on Business Boulevard. Stop by and check out the display. You can get a good look at what's out there and know what to be on the lookout for.

Good luck and let the games begin!

Winter Games, Iditarod share locale, scheduling

By LEE JORDAN
Alaska Star Editor

The 1996 Arctic Winter Games are being hosted in the community of Chugiak - Eagle River, located in the northern portion of the Municipality of Anchorage. It is a picturesque but lively area which figured prominently in Alaska's early history.

During the week of the Games, the world-renowned Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race is being held between Anchorage and Nome. That event memorializes the valiant relay run in which dog teams and drivers carried diphtheria serum to Nome to combat an outbreak of that dreaded disease in 1925.

A total of 61 mushers will be represented in this year's Iditarod race. Only 60 teams will be on the trail, however, since the starting position is an honorary one. This year it recognizes the late Bill Vaudrin, an educator and author who mushed in two Iditarod races. He died in 1976.

Early editions of the Iditarod assigned Bib No. 1 to Leonhard Seppala, one of the 1925 Iditarod mushers, and his lead dog Balto.

The original Iditarod Trail connected the goldfields of the Seward Peninsula and the Yukon with Southcentral Alaska during the winter. It was a major wintertime route, serving passengers, freight and mail. Its name was taken from the gold camp at Iditarod.

People who used the trail passed through Eagle River Valley, following the river for a dozen or so miles before crossing over the ridges of the Chugach Mountains at Crow Creek Pass. Traces of a log roadhouse that served as lodging for mushers can still be seen along the trail which has been restored and marked by volunteers.

Anchorage did not exist in the early days of this century, being established as the headquarters for the Alaska Railroad when construction began in 1916.

A winter camp for miners and trappers who traveled the Iditarod was the settlement of Knik, across Knik Arm from Eagle River. During the summer months, Knik was a port used by ocean-going boats which brought supplies and passengers to the head of Cook Inlet.

One of the mushers who covered the overland route in the 1920s was George Smock. Smock's sourdough image was immortalized by noted Alaska artist Fred Machetanz who used the former musher as a model for many of his drawings.

Interviewed in 1973, when the Iditarod race first began, Smock snorted when asked what he thought of the 1,049-mile trek as a sporting event.

"It was bad enough when you had to do it," he said. "Anybody who did it for fun would have to be crazy."

There have been many mushers since who would argue with Smock's view of the race. On the trail during the most challenging conditions Nature can offer, some racers, though, would agree with the one-time miner and early-day

Iditarod Trail dog-team driver.

One of those who would dispute Smock's opinion is Libby Riddles, the first female musher to win the race that has grown to gain international fame. Even though she had been involved in dog mushing for a decade, her two previous Iditarod attempts did not have distinguishing results, so her 1985 victory was considered to be an upset. It came after she made a daring decision to push on through a blinding snowstorm for the final dash toward Nome, leaving behind those who were to become that year's also-rans.

In addition to becoming the first woman to win the grueling race, Riddles won the Humanitarian Award for the best treatment of her dogs during the race. She was also voted Professional Sportswoman of the Year by the New York City Women's Sports Foundation.

Riddles has served since 1991 as a director of the International Games Corporation.

The 1996 Iditarod began on Saturday in Anchorage, when mushers drove from the Downtown starting line to the Eagle River Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9785. Members of that organization for many years have hosted a stew luncheon served at the completion of the starting leg.

Until 1994, the Eagle River finish line was an official checkpoint of the race. The VFW post offered a cash prize of $1,049 to the musher with the fastest time to Eagle River who went on to complete the race at Nome.

George Smock, who lived near the Izaak Walton League Shooting Range in Birchwood before his death several years ago, drove dog sleds loaded with freight and mail over the Iditarod Trail in the 1920s. A real sourdough, he was the model for several drawings by noted Alaska artist Fred Machetanz.

Eagle River's distinguished visitor

By KRISTENSEINE
Alaska Star Reporter

The Arctic Winter Games are bringing visitors to Chugiak - Eagle River from all over the world — northern Alaska, Canada, Russia, Greenland... and Rock Falls, Ill. One of them goes by the name of Elwood.

Elwood is a wooden doll. And although he isn't even human, he's got a resume that makes James Bond look like a couch potato. At the tender age of 15 (he's only in fifth grade), Elwood has already travelled more than 4 million miles, met three U.S. presidents, lunched on the terrace of Parliament, travelled to outer space aboard the Discovery

Space Shuttle and mushed a dog team.

Now Elwood is in Alaska to visit the Arctic Winter Games. He's living the dream of many a student at Thorne Elementary School in Rock Falls, and brings a lot of knowledge to Alaska students as well.

Elwood was created by fifth-grade teacher Doug Hand in 1980 after a parent chastised him for teaching his students about "Pinocchio," the story of a puppet come to life as a boy. Hand believed students should always have something to believe in—"imagination is the key that will open any door," he said.

The four-foot-high doll only weighs about 12 pounds fully clothed, and doesn't ask for any fancy living accommodations, said his host, Brian Fay, second grade teacher at Fire Lake Elementary School. He travelled to Alaska via UPS—in a trash can.

"Before he was here, he took a vacation on the beach in Hawaii," Fay said. "He's been on the Goodyear blimp during the Super Bowl and once he travelled with Malcom Forbes for a week by motorcycle."

The guy's been around.

Fay said his students at Fire Lake absolutely love the life-sized doll, and even insisted Elwood be placed on the class's attendance roster. "He's been absent quite a bit, but he's been busy working his project."

His project? The 1996 Arctic Winter Games. "He's been helping out a lot over at the (Arctic Winter Games) store over there," Fay said.

The plan is that Elwood will get to visit the various venues of the Games, bringing back souvenirs, photos and other items related to Alaska when he goes home to Thorne Elementary. Lisa Farber, athletic director for the Games, said his agenda is not yet cemented, but "Elwood pretty much goes with whoever gets the whim to take him along."

Fay did have a few direct orders from the class in Illinois. "After here, Elwood's going to play hockey with the Chicago Blackhawks, so they asked us to please give him some ice skating lessons," Fay said.

Last weekend, Elwood got a lesson in ice carving here in Eagle River and learned a bit about dog mushing at the Business Persons' Race during Winterfest. Elwood should have a lot to talk about when he gets home.

He's already taught a thing or two to the students at Fire Lake, Fay said. "They've learned a lot about where he's been," he said.

Fay said Elwood's garbage can is filled with photos, newspaper articles and the like, which his students have enjoyed perusing. "They've travelled where he's travelled," he said.

Elwood, a life-size doll from Rock Falls, Ill., sat ready to ride in a popular sled dog race held every year in Eagle River. Elwood is visiting the Arctic Winter Games from a fifth-grade class at Thorne Elementary School in Illinois.

Games mascot selected by city-wide contest

The 1996 Arctic Winter Games Host Society logo was selected as a result of a city-wide contest offered to all students in the Anchorage area.

The winning design was produced by Anchorage East High School student Kerry Neill. Her original design best satisfied the criteria of the contest, which required the entrants to incorporate the mountains and rivers, the dominant geographical features of the Chugiak-Eagle River area; the spruce tree which represents the year-round tenacity of the northern people and the salmon, representing the cycles of nature and the continuity of the Arctic Winter Games.

Given its importance to the survival and culture of the indigenous Alaskan people, the salmon has also been selected as the official mascot of the 1996 Games.

Named after the Dena'ina word for "fish," BaBa is a lively, friendly creature who loves sports and people. BaBa will exemplify the warm reception and the spirit of the Games that will be shared by all who join in.
