Time ticking for crafts fair

Time is running out to attend the 1996 Arctic Winter Games Arts and Crafts Fair being held at Eagle River Elementary School.

More than 60 Alaskan artists are selling handmade arts and crafts at the fair. Included in the fair are dolls, beadwork, silver, ivory, baskets, art, slippers and mukluks, Arctic frogs, stoneware, winter wear, photographs, sculptures, wooden items, quiviut, ulus, spirit masks, storytelling tapes, Eskimo drums, ceramics, toys, furs and leather, baleen, soapstone and wind chimes.

The fair will be open today from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, call 694-8866.

Think about making final trade

Well folks, trading is down to the wire now! This is getting to be your last chance to find that pin you need to complete a set. You might want to start paring down your doubles and negotiating the best deal you can. Holding out too long can get you caught short.

Don't forget that jackets, hats, jerseys and other great items are also valuable trading stock! Line up your swap now and don't go home disappointed!

The hot pins still out there are the "Spirit of the Games," the "Bus" and the gold "Host Society" pin. They seem to be the hardest ones to nail down. Don't forget the 1999 host society pin from Yellowknife.

You're also seeing a lot of pin book appearing. Seems like each set of game produced one. We've seen some from the 1994 game just appearing for the last two days the purple one from this set of games. The available at Baba's Cove if there's any. Pins that are for sale are going quickly out the various sites such as the Visual exhibit and the McDonald Center for the pin.

For those of you who started late and don't want to try to scramble to fill the stop by Baba's Cove and purchase a few. There are only a very limited amount left and when they're gone they're gone.

Ordinary performance, extraordinary results

By STACY SIMONET
Alaska Star Managing Editor

What started out as an ordinary cultural performance at Chugiak Senior Center turned out to be an extraordinary reunion of long lost family and friends.

The Atak Dancers, a group of Native performers from the Aleutian Chain, went to the Chugiak Senior Center to do a few dances and have lunch with the center residents.

During a performance for the people in the Adult Daycare, Ethan Petticrew, one of the dancers, was looking around the room.

"I was looking because I like to look at people who are watching us," Petticrew said. "As I was looking, I thought 'Gee, this face looks really familiar.'"

At the end of the performance, Petticrew went to the familiar face and said "Alice?"

Alice Martin, an elderly woman whose mind is slipping, recognized the dancer. Martin just happened to be Petticrew's wife Jolene's aunt. Petticrew hadn't seen Martin in over eight years, he wasn't even certain where she was living.

"She grabbed me and gave me a great big hug and a kiss," said Petticrew. "She didn't want to let me go."

"It was really a nice surprise for me," Petticrew said. "I was only wishing my wife and children were with me."

Petticrew, a teacher in a school of 21 students and father of two children ages 8 and 3, said seeing Martin made the entire Arctic Winter Games experience better than he ever could have imagined.

"They had a family reunion right here," said Nancy Lourie, director of Adult Daycare at the center. "It was such an upbeat time."

Ethan Petticrew of the Atak Dancers had an emotional reunion with a relative after a performance at the Chugiak Senior Center earlier this week.

However, Lourie said Martin wasn't the only Adult Daycare participant to renew an old friendship.

A chaperon of the dance group, Duane Magoon, and a daycare resident named Joel Tegeler just happened to be old high school classmates.

"Here they were swapping pictures and family stories," Lourie said.

"I was very, very surprised," said Tegeler, longtime Alaska resident. Tegeler said he met Magoon through his brother many years ago.

"That was very exciting for me. It had been over 20 years (since I'd seen Magoon)," Tegeler said. "I was trying to figure out what his shirt said when he recognized me. He recognized me even with my beard."

Tegeler, who suffers from Multiple Sclerosis, said he was very thrilled about the reunion.

Magoon wasn't available for comment, Tegeler said he had already returned home.

As for Petticrew and Martin, Petticrew said he hopes to return to the center before he leaves the Games. He said he will show off family pictures and stories.

"I can't wait to call my wife and tell her," Petticrew said.

Lourie said all of the Arctic Winter Games participants that have visited the center have provided a "boost" to the center.

Family thanks Alberta coach

Dear Ulu News:

Our family wishes to express our sincere appreciation to a Team Alberta coach for his magnanimous gesture during the Arctic Winter Games Opening Ceremonies.

We were seated on ground level benches with excellent view of the field until the athletic teams were instructed to surround the entire field. Subsequently, our view was totally blocked and our children could not see despite standing on the benches.

Upon noticing our situation, an adult coach from Team Alberta offered to take our children up front onto the field. We explained that we were merely spectators, but he insisted that they should be given the opportunity to view the children's dancing performance.

The gentleman escorted them to the front of his team, watched over them, and then carried them back to us after the fireworks.

This generous act of kindness has made a lasting impression on our children. The spirit of goodwill and friendship is truly present at the 1996 Arctic Winter Games!

The Quenneville Family.

Volunteer and her six children work hard

By SASHA PREWITT
Ulu News Volunteer Writer

Volunteer work for the 1996 Arctic Winter Games is a family affair for Kynda Richardson. She involved her six children, Edward, 14, Olivia, 13, Dana, 8, Kyle, 7, Avery, 5 and Justin, 2, in helping her stuff envelopes for fundraising dinner auction and helping out at BaBa's Cove, the Arctic Winter Games' souvenir store.

Working with her children is not new. Richardson, 33, is a Boy and Cub Scout leader as well as being a committee member for Pack 27, Troop 27, Varsity Teams and Explorer Group. She is the Roundtable Commissioner for the Cub Scouts for the Eklutna District. Richardson handles advances for the Cub Scouts and is the secretary for the Boy Scout Committee. She became a Scout leader in 1989.

After hearing about the Arctic Winter Games' need for volunteers, Richardson thought it would be a good idea to get local scout troops involved.

"I personally went and volunteered," she said. "They didn't ask me or anything. I went to the Boy Scouts office and told them it would be great to get involved in this."

Richardson agreed to be the coordinator for all Scout troops from Palmer/Wasilla ar-

"I didn't realize it had been that many hours because I didn't want to keep track of my hours and they were like, 'oh, no, please, you have to keep track of your hours.' That's not what I was doing it for, I just did it because I thought it would be fun and I wanted to help."

Volunteer

eas to Anchorage. As the Scout Coordinator, she helped match Scout units up with Games projects. After she signed on as coordinator, she got involved with other areas of the Games. The demand for Scouts was not as great as she anticipated, which led her in a different direction.

She helped out at a couple of volunteer orientations, inventoried and sold Games merchandise at the office and in the store in Eagle River. She designed six posters for the Volunteer Rally on Feb. 24 at the request of Nancy Killoran, Games Media Coordinator. Richardson sorted through dozens of photos showing volunteers participating in assorted Games activities. Once the selections were made, she mounted the photos on posterboard.

"She (Nancy) just said, 'can you do this for me?' so I did," Richardson said.

In addition to designing duties, Richardson solicited items for the dinner auction, arranging for pickup of donations and with the help of her children addressed and stuffed invitations to the auction. She will also chauffeur VIPs around the Games.

"I'm down to be a VIP driver so I'll be driving around during the Games as well as getting my kids to where they need to be to help and I'll probably help out in the store," she said.

One of her most memorable experiences was getting her 50-hour volunteer pin.

"That floored me," she said. "I didn't realize it had been that many hours because I didn't want to keep track of my hours and they were like, 'oh, no, please, you have to keep track of your hours.' That's not what I was doing it for, I just did it because I thought it would be fun and I wanted to help."

Richardson estimates she has a total about 75 volunteer hours under her belt right now with many more left before the Games end. She has a lot of fond memories of volunteer duties.

"I remember a lot of different things," she said. "I've probably put in more time than I thought I would originally."

Richardson would jump at the chance to volunteer again. She doesn't think the Games have changed her busy lifestyle.

"I've always been busy trying to help others," she said. "I guess if it changed it any just made it a little busier. I had to shuffle few things around to fit everything in that I wanted to get done but it happened and kids haven't suffered. They like going and helping and participating."

"You can always find an hour or two to help in the week regardless of how busy you think you are and even the littlest things are important. As I got phone calls, they always came at a point where I could handle it."

Radio operators ham it up for Games

By JEANNE ENRIGHT
Alaska Star Reporter

Most of us have probably never given much thought to the value of ham radios and their operators, but their support of the Arctic Winter Games (AWG) is something that should make us stand up and take notice.

Over 40 amateur radio operators from Southcentral Alaska have set up an elaborate communications network in support of the Games.

Larry Strain, president of the Anchorage Amateur Radio Club, began working with the Communications Committee over a year before the Games to determine the communications needs that the operators could fulfill.

The result of this planning is a system of two communications networks and a Special Events Amateur Radio Station.

The Special Events Station is set up at Chugiak High School, across from the Mission Office. It is connected to a large antenna, which was erected on the roof of the school with the help of Ken Allen, an instructor at Chugiak who is also an amateur operator.

The purpose of the Special Events Station is to make contacts with other radio amateurs worldwide, and to promote the Arctic Winter Games.

To date, contacts with stations in Russia, Tahiti, Japan and Brazil have been made, as well as with numerous stations in Canada and the U.S.

But the most useful service the network has served in the Games is to allow athletes to send messages to their parents all over the Lower 48 and other countries.

"So far, we've been given 58 messages, and only four of those were undeliverable because they had the wrong phone numbers written down," Strain said, "and we couldn't help that."

Special commemorative certificates will be sent to all the stations contacted during the Games.

Another helpful service provided by the operators is a Venue Communications Network, which operates between the Chugiak, Fire Lake and Gruening villages and the Kincaid Park, Alpenglow Ski Area, Media Center and dog track venues, Strain said.

Any Games participant, official, volunteer or even visitor can send messages between venues and villages by filling out a message form at one of the venues' Communications Message Centers and giving it to a radio operator.

And in the event of emergency, people can be dispatched to any location to send messages, Strain said.

Outgoing message forms are color-coded blue and have the instructions for their use on the back. The radio operator will relay the message to its destination venue or village where it will be copied on a message form and delivered.

Another network run by radio operators helps ensure the accuracy of the Games' results.

The packet radio network uses a "digipeter" to dispatch the latest results to the Media Center.

The Media Center gets faxes of the results at the same time, Strain said, but the radio transmission is important, since it confirms the results before they are announced publicly.

"They use our transmission as a check to make sure they get all the (fax) pages," Strain said.

The results are then printed out at the villages and posted for the athletes to review.

The system essentially networks computers — but it does it without the benefit of cables or wires.

"In many ways, we're more advanced than the commercial systems," Strain said.

"In fact, this packet radio system has been on every space shuttle ever launched — they can communicate with (people on earth) using ham radios, he said.

"(Being an operator) is a fun hobby, and technical-type people get interested in it."

In addition to operating the communications networks, the amateur radio operators have been assisting the communications and security staff in maintaining their radio equipment.

Thursday's earthquake provided an excellent example of the usefulness of these networks.

It seems the quake temporarily knocked out the antenna that was being used by the AWG's security system. Lil Martin, director of the Amateur Radio Emergency System, had that system activated within 15 minutes of the quake, Strain said.

If an emergency had occurred during that time, then the radio operators could have stepped in immediately with a fully-operational communications network, he said.

In fact, it was a ham radio operator that first got news to the Lower 48 that half of Anchorage was destroyed by the March 27, 1964 earthquake, Strain said.

"So amateur radio has a long, illustrious history in Alaska," he said.

And by the way, if you're wondering about the origin of the term "ham radio operator, don't bother.

"To be quite honest with you, no one knows where that name came from," Strain said.

Alaska wrestlers win 10 gold ulus

Team Alaska continued their domination in Arctic Winter Games wrestling through Thursday's freestyle finals held in the upper gym at Chugiak High.

Carrying a 44-win, 4-loss record into the finals, Team Alaska won 10 golds and two silvers in the bantam and junior level bouts.

Coach Andy Murr said he was pleased with the team's performances throughout the week. Two of the more exciting matches included the 67 kg junior finals between Alaska's Ryan Rasmussen and Yukon's Shane Casselman. While Casselman won in earlier round-robin action, Rasmussen, who is a varsity high school wrestler for Murr at Wasilla, overturned his earlier loss with a technical fall midway in the four-minute bout. Team Alaska's 76 kg Rod Pucak defeated Yukon's Jimmy Schafer in the last seconds to secure the gold ulu.

Miekel Delaney lost a tough 60 kg bantam final to Aaron McCulloch, of Yukon, 10-7.

Team Alaska gold medalists included David Moore of Eagle River; David Loring; Shawn Jurco; Jason Buhlert; Tony D'Amico; Jason Beaudoin; Terry Hollis of Eagle River; Ryan Rasmussen; Rod Pucak and Nate Dutton.

Until recently, Sveta Poplavskaja had never even heard of the Arctic Sports. When Team Magadan arrived here, they were still unsure of the rules and correct techniques.

Sveta had only three months to prepare, and admits she's made some mistakes in the competition. In spite of that, she's done well enough to take home two bronze ulus — in the Alaska High Kick and the Knee Jump.

Fifteen-year-old Sveta credits her competition and their coaches with part of her success. She says they have been very kind to help her learn the right moves. Members of the teams from other Games contingents, on the other hand, say the Russians have been quick to learn and master the techniques.

Sveta became involved in this sport when Magadan officials began looking for likely candidates for the next Olympics. They came to her school and selected her. She then competed in a mini-Olympics for a place on the Winter Games team.

The two foot high kick competition Wednesday was her last event. Now she'll be spending her time here watching others perform in the Arctic Winter Games, so that she'll be a force to be reckoned with two years from now.

Cultural performances offer much

By LESLIE SEAMÓN
Ulu News Volunteer Writer

On the surface, it looks like a week of fun, free shows for children at Adante's Restaurant. But there is more going on than just entertainment. Children are learning about Alaska history. They are being encouraged to become avid readers. Through games and music, they are given the message that they can feel good about themselves, and therefore can be more tolerant of others. They are being exposed to different languages and cultures. And the adults who escort them to these activities are rediscovering the children in themselves.

Glenn Guy, aka "Dusty Sourdough," is on stage daily through Saturday (1 to 2 p.m.). He looks like the quintessential Alaska man of the 1800s who has come forward through time to tell about life on the Last Frontier. Through Dusty's adventures, Guy paints pictures in the minds of his listeners about how difficult, dangerous and downright interesting life was here a century ago. He closes by telling the children that they can't play the game if they can't read the directions. He believes his reading message is successful because, "Dusty Sourdough is a character, not a real grown-up, so they listen to him and want to learn to read."

When singer/composer Al Levy and his little partner Adam came on stage Wednesday afternoon, they got everybody into the act. Levy writes children's songs and his son Adam has been singing for most of his 2-1/2 years of life. They both play guitar. They sang about animals and pizza and self-esteem — songs that required audience participation. Levy asked the children to sing along and copy his gestures. But he got a much bigger response than that. Parents began to sing, too, and to dance with their children. Levy expected that to happen.

"I'd rather play for kids than in a smokey beer hall. Kids are always in the mood to sing and play along. Then adults get into the act and lose their inhibitions when they see the kids doing it," he said.

Levy is a youth counselor at McLaughlin Correction Center and he's been a professional musician for 15 years. He uses music to make people feel good about themselves. He got a great audience response Wednesday, especially on the songs where children got to make animal noises and the song that incorporated each of the youngsters' names. He is starting a singing class for children under 5 years of age. For more information, call 272-SING.

Each afternoon at 3 p.m. at Adante's, there are cultural performances. Wednesday's cultural team was from Tyumen. The group, Zhuravushka, takes its name from a little Russian bird. They sang songs about everyday life, simple, but symbolic — songs about love and deep feelings. The audience didn't understand the symbolism, but simply enjoyed the colorful costumes and the sounds of their voices and balalaikas. Lead singer Tanya Rakitina said the language was no barrier. They felt like the audience was supporting them, especially the children.

"Children feel the music. They don't need the language," she said.

Rakitina and her partners were smiling after the performance. They claimed they would remember this day for a long time to come.

Magadan boys soccer undefeated

The Magadan juvenile boys indoor soccer team remained undefeated with a 13-1 win over Yukon Wednesday and 6-3 win against Northwest Territories Thursday morning.

Timofei Jarkov scored seven goals Wednesday and four more Thursday to gain the league's top seed as they enter Friday's medal round.

In late game action Wednesday, Greenland defeated NWT 5-3 in junior girls play. Ane Mettid Fontain and Marianne Neilsen scored two goals each for Greenland, while Kelly Loubert had two for NWT.

In addition to Jarkov's seven goals during Magadan's 13-1 victory over Yukon, Rodiov Toheremnov had three, and teammate Ian Kozatchko two.

Alberta defeated Greenland 6-4 in boys junior play and Yukon held off Alberta 7-5 in juvenile boys action. Yukon had held a 5-1 lead at the end of the first half, but Kyle Finner and Graham Sim scored two goals each to help in the comeback.

The Team Alaska juvenile girls scored a big win in defeating NWT 9-4 early Thursday. Laura Wood, Stephanie Krawczyk, Kelly Quinn, Carly Tibbets and Jessica Szandland each scored one goal in the second half to put the game away. Szandland and Pamy Winders had two additional goals in the first half. Elizabeth Boncher had two goals for NWT.

Magadan defeated NWT 6-3 helped by Jarkov's three goals. Darryl Schick and Isaac Ayiku had one goal each for NWT.

Team Alaska lost to Yukon 6-5 in a heartbreaker. After leading 3-1 at halftime, Yukon stole the victory with four goals by Mollie Lang. Lang finished with five goals.

Alberta rode the laurels of member Mario Acuirre's four goals enroute to their 9-7 win over Yukon in the junior male division. Also scoring for Alberta was Jason Cahill, Simon Pacey, Jamson Colameco and Mark Blanche, with two goals. Danny MacDonald scored five times for Yukon and Johoan Kulicki had two.

Alberta North strong in badminton

By BROOK SARVELA
Alaska Star Student Writer

The fourth day of badminton competition swung into action early yesterday morning at Chugiak High School.

Alberta North is one of the stronger teams competing. Gwenanne Jorgenson commented, "They're doing quite well. Most are playing each other now."

One of Alberta's strongest players is Ivan Lee, an under 19 junior player. Lee won three gold medals in both of the two previous Arctic Winter Games and is looking to win three again this week.

"If Ivan wins, he may have the Games record for the most consecutive wins," added Jorgenson.

The Team Alaska duo of Josh Simmons and Rock Arnold rallied against a first game loss to the Northwest Territories team of Mark Steinward and Jimmy Main to win the quarterfinal match 3-15, 15-7, 15-7.

"It started off bad," said Arnold of their playing during the games, "but now it's pretty good."

A few hours after playing Northwest Territories, Simmons and Arnold were back on the court in a semifinal match against Kenneth Anderson and Karl Kasper Olsen of Greenland.

Simmons and Arnold lost the first game 8-15. Using their quick feet and excellent playing skills, the pair rallied to win the second game 15-10. Simmons and Arnold overcame a 5-10 slip in the third game to win the final game 15-12.

Simmons and Arnold will play in the final match against Alberta today at Chugiak High School. "I'm looking forward to it," commented Simmons, who will also play in the singles final against Lee. "We'll listen to our coach and he'll tell us what to do."

"Our boys junior doubles have a good chance of winning, along with the open and the juveniles," commented Alaska coach Lee Jung. "Josh has a good shot at singles, too."

Matches begin at 8 a.m. today at Chugiak High School. Today is the final day of badminton.

Alaska skaters now official

Hope to be more competitive with Canadian teams

By STACY SIMONET
Alaska Star Managing Editor

Canada appears to have the edge on the speedskating competition. However, Alaska hopes to change that for the next Arctic Winter Games and the Anchorage - Eagle River Speedskating Club is facilitating the change.

"We are where Northwest Territories and Alberta were a couple of years ago," said Lance Smith, treasurer of the club and volunteer at the Games. That is why the Speedskating Club was formed and sanctioned by the Amateur Speedskating Union of the United States (ASU).

The club is the first recognized club in the state. And thanks to becoming sanctioned the Arctic Winter Games had help from Doc Savage and Tim Quinn of ASU. Savage helped with organizing the races and Quinn is an official.

"This (becoming sanctioned) is a big deal. We're actually part of a network," Smith said.

"We did it so we could coach the kids and they could have access to different stuff," Smith said. He said a big part of being sanctioned is getting insurance so indoor ice time can be booked.

Similar clubs in Northwest Territories and Alberta have over 100 skaters. He said the best of those skaters are at the Games.

"That is who we are racing against, so if you see we got a medal it's because we worked our feet off," Smith said.

The Anchorage - Eagle River club, only a few months old, had 12 skaters in the Games competition. The 13th skater on Team Alaska is from Fairbanks.

"It's a pretty big turnout from the club," Smith said. He said he would like to see other clubs form around the state.

Now that the club is sanctioned, skaters can earn badges for moving up, are able to qualify for scholarships and will receive a monthly newsletter to help with networking.

Smith said that the club is also going to organize a state championship for short-track racing. "We hope our competition here (in the Games) hasn't scared off the others."

COMPETE HARD

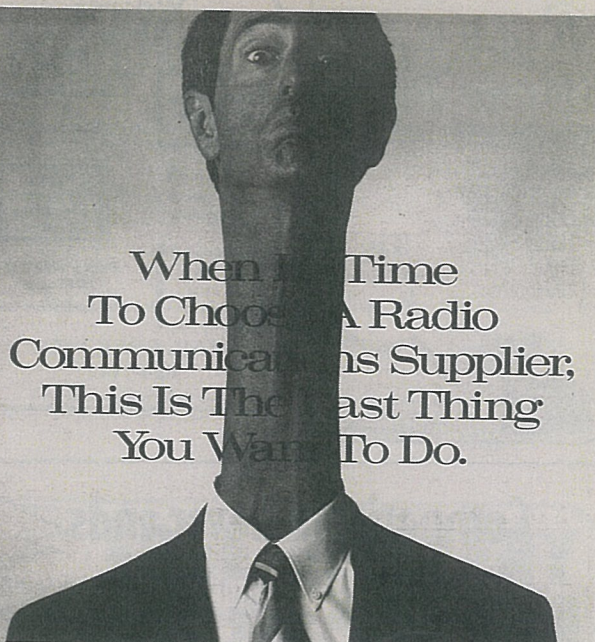

REST ON US!

Alaska Commercial Company and The North West Company, the North's leading retailers for over 300 years, together with Woods Canada, Canada's foremost name in outdoor equipment, are proud to again donate sleeping bags to every participant at the Arctic Winter Games.

Congratulations to each of the more than 1,500 athletes, coaches and officials. We know what it takes to perform in the North. Compete hard, have fun and sleep well!

"Northern Performance You Can Count On...For Over 300 Years"

Before you stick your neck out and invest your community's money on a radio communications system, it pays to ask around.

Ask police officers which radio communications equipment they rely on to protect their citizens. Ask fire fighters which equipment they trust most during emergencies. Ask your friends in government what supplier they turn to to solve their radio communications needs.

Time and time again, you'll hear the Motorola name. And with good reason. Motorola is one of the world's leading providers of wireless communications. And we've been providing communications solutions to government agencies for more than 50 years.

Why stick your neck out, when all you have to do is ask Motorola.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH SPORTS.

Athletics bring together people from all over the world. They open up a line of communication, and help us all enjoy life a little more. Kind of like MACTel.

We're pleased to be an official sponsor of the 1996 Arctic Winter Games. We thank the more than 2,000 volunteers and 1,500 athletes and coaches that have made this a truly memorable occasion.
